

Adrian A. Pedroza

Adrián A. Pedroza is the Executive Director of the Partnership for Community Action, a grassroots, community-based organization that works to build community leadership around issues of immigration, education reform, and public health. Previously, Adrián worked with the University of New Mexico High School Equivalency and College Assistance Migrant Programs, which provide educational opportunities to migrant and seasonal farm workers and their families. In addition, he worked with New Mexico constituents for U.S. Senator Jeff Bingaman.

In 2011, Adrián was appointed by President Obama to his Advisory Commission on Educational Excellence for Hispanics, where he sits on the Early Learning and Community Engagement sub-committees. Under Governor Bill Richardson, Adrián was appointed to the inaugural Hispanic Education Advisory Council. He is currently a founding and executive member of the New Mexico Learning Alliance. Adrián holds a B.A. and an M.B.A. from the University of New Mexico.
