

Dr. Octavio Pescador, is a university professor who has taught education and social sciences at numerous institutions domestically and internationally including Cal State LA and the University of Southern California.

Pescador is an academic administrator and scholar who serves as research associate for the UCLA Paulo Freire Institute in the Graduate School of Education and Information Studies.

He has worked with Los Angeles students and immigrant groups in both formal and popular education settings. He is a service learning advocate and a student centered practitioner. Pescador has served as an academic advisor for multiple educational organizations including the California Department of Education, Families in Schools, Larchmont Charter School, the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund and Thomas Jefferson Senior High School. Pescador earned a bachelor's degree in political science from UCLA, a master's degree in international development education from Stanford University and a Ph.D. in education from UCLA.